

Dear Friends:

As a certified member of the upper middle class, I would like to protest the use of a four-letter obscenity which lately has been appearing in the Free Press. I mean, of course, the word "pigs" referring, apparently, to the police and other constabulary forces. This word, which I shall henceforth indicate by p gs, is extra nely offensive to anyone who remotely sympathizes with the idea of a gentler, more humane society, which, I always believed, the WFP was about in the first place.

It is believed that the word p gs for the police was first used by the Black Pussy Cats or some other such group on the West Coast. The hang-ups of the Black Pussy Cats are their hang-ups. The WFP and its correspondents can sympathiz? with the Black Pussy Cats or the Green Berets or the Blue Meanies without copying their language, particularly if copying their language means obscenity. And, friends, it is obscene to refer to other human beings as p gs. This is quite literally the de-humanization of human beings, and as soon as you conceive of another person as non-human, you can perpetrate all sorts of obscenities on him. Viz: "Into the oven, Jewish dog." Or, "Look for the mushroom cloud, Jap rats." Or, "I just got me a big buck nigger."

No matter what their faults, the police are not p gs. Some among them may, indeed, be saints, but even the worst are men. Please do us all the grace of referring to them as such.

Yours truly, M. J. Halberstam

CITIZENS ELIMINATE DISTRICT FREEWAYS

by Duggan Flanakin

The voteless masses of the District of Columbia won a major victory when their presidentiall appointed "representatives" -- The National Capital Planning Commission and the D.C. City Council __ voted overwhelmingly to eliminate the Interstate Projects, Three Sister's Bridge, and the North Central Freeway from the city's highway program, despite Congressional threats to withhold subwayfunds until these and other road projects were started. The NCPC and Council actions came after a series of public hearings where Distrcit citizens had voiced strong opposition to any freeway building, citing displacement of families and businesses, high costs, air pollution, traffic congestion, weakening of the subway system, and rascism, as reasons against these suburbia oriented projects.

Spokesmen for the militantly anti-freeway Emergency Committee for the Transportation Crisis joined City Council Chairman John Hechinger in calling the NCPC action a "landmark decision", noting that only once before had any local body rejeteted outright Interstate Highway money (under which 90% of the financing is paid by the Federal Government). The commission's statement cited the need to carefully control the automobile to insure that 'its numbers are not to seriously damage urban America".

However, Federal Highway Administrator Lowell Bridgewell has called the NCPC plan unsatisfactory and unworkable and contrary to Federal law passed earlier this year requiring immediate construction of the Three Sister's Bridge and other projects. This raises the possibility of a showdown with the 91st Congress over appropriations for both the highway program and the subway.

ECTC spokesman R. H. Booker has repeatedly stated that his grpup is ready for such a fight and that no white man's freeways will be built through black man's neighborhoods.

The key to replacement of the freeways with a balanced rapid transit system rests ultimately with the suburban voters, according to Sammie Abbott, ECTC TC publicity chairman. They must accept that they cannot have these roads and they will have to fight Natcher (of the House District Appropriations sub-committee) to release the subway funds. Votes for subway bonds last month indicated they may be willing to do so, even though several Maryland public officials have condemned the city Council's action.

DC PUBLIC BILKED ON PARKING AREAS

by Duggan Flanakin

Retired Congressional aide J. George Frain, in an open letter to all D.C. civic organizations, has charged that the Tydings Broyhill "compromise" bill to saddle the District with a parking authority could cost D.C. residents $5,000,000,000 or more merely for land purchased under eminent domain. Frain added that the bill could force removal of up to three-quarter miles from the city's property tax rolls, worsen the city's desperate housing situation, and provide a back door for the cancellation of the city's rapid transit system. The letter urges District residents to activily oppose the bill and the National Capitol Planning Commission's Transportation and Vehicular Parking Plan, which calls for 90,000 parking spaces by 1985.

In determining the estimated cost of the parking bill, Frain cited U.S News and World Report (Dec. 2), which reported that studies for Helsinki, Fire land by an American consulting firm indicated it would take a square mile parking lot three. stories high to park 100, 000 cars. Noting that Isnd in the central business district is currently selling for $150 to. $200 per square foot, Frain said that the Tydings-Broyhill Bill would direct the D.C. government to build parking garages in the Central Business District at a cost for the land alone of $5,000 per parked car.

Even worse, a Washington Post article (Potomac Magazine, Dec. 8.) states that' there are 350,000 automobiles in motion along just 350 miles of road" during the evening rush hour; hence the total parking requirements under the NCPC plan might call for three such 1-mile square behemoths at a cost of $15, 000, 000, 000. lone would cost more han double the $2.1 billion re quired to complete the area wide rand transit-subway system. And this is the bill which Rep. Joel Broyhill and Sen.

Joe Tydings of Maryland said will have the first priority among the new legislation in the 91st Congress (see WFP Nov.

1-15, #43). Curiously, Frain suggests, the Establishment Press has backed the Tydings-Broyhill bill and supports the NCPC plan as good for the District despite the fact that it would only benefit suburban commu ters,. In addition the utility of the garages is directly tied to freeawy construction, which D.C. residents have almost unanimously opposed. With liberal friends like the Post and the Star, I rain argues, D.C. residents might do well to support arch-conservative Reps. E.R. Gross, John Ashbrook, and Durward III actions were solely responsi ble for preventing the Tydings-Broyhill Bill from becoming law last October.

Richard Nixon's office has sent out 80,000 letters asking prominent people to help them in a personnel search for "men and women who by their qualities of youthfulness, judgment, intelligence and creativity can make significant contributions to our country." It is a sad but true commentary on the state of this society that the young people who best fit that description are largely the ones who have dropped out of the mainstream of American life and are actively using their youth, judgment, intelligence and creativity to oppose and ultimately destroy the reactionism that was and is Richard Nixon, his public relations notwithstanding.

The American Cynic of the Month Award goes this month to Tom Williams, president of the National Automobile Dealers Association. Testifying Dec. 5th. at the Senate's car-repair hearing to answer charges that repairs done mainly at new-car dealerships are made improperly

With all those "Support Your Local Police" bumper stickers around, I think it's time we had some counter stickers like "Draft Cops --They're Already Violent" or "Kill a pig for Christ" or even "Support Your Local Police --Or They'll Kill You." Those who are willing to carry such a sticker on their car should contact the WFP office -- we're going to have a pool on whose car car is the first to get towed away, stripped and burned.

* * * * * * * * * Establishment press people are fond of putting down the Une Underground Press for not being "objective" enough. The Underground press they claim m unsubtle didn't serve to keep the press from treating it as "divine revelation", thus further indoctrinating that oh-so-pliable piece of clay known as the American mass mind. Similar pronouncements made daily by Government VIP's receive the same exalted, unadulterated, uncommented upon treatment. Anything less would not be "objective".

The State Department has termed the Biafran rejection of daytime relief food flights as "incomprehensible". State Department spokesman Robert McCloskey said: It is a source of intense regret and puzzlement to us that, despite the millions of Biafran lives at stake, Col. Ojukwa, who heads the Biafran regime, has not yet given his agreement".

Indeed very sad. But is it any sadder or any more incomprehensible than Southern Congressmen and Governors blocking food relief to hungry

Williams also said:"If these allegations were absolute fact, "the Nation's new-car dealers dealers "would be tarred and feathered and ridden out of town." (Wash. Post, Dec. 6) This is merely a restatement of one of the many myths about the American economic system

- that American businesses don't need any government control to insure honest, com- 1petent services and products because if they don't satisfy the customer he'll take his patronage elsewhere. Czechoslovak cultural leaders have called on their government to appoint a special commission to investigate and give a full public report on who "invited" five Warsaw Pact powers to invade their country last August. The Soviet Union at that time claimed that " Party and government leaders" of Ocechoslovakia had requested their armed assistance.

Very nice. We think it's should just stick to the "facts" and not "editorialize". An example of this "Objective" reporting appeared in the Wash. Post Dec. 6. The Post reported that the House Commmitee on Un-American Activities has scheduled Jerry Rubin to be heard in a closed session because "it did not want to prejudice his Chicago trial on charges growing out of the clashes with police." Quite true. That's what the Committee said. No reporting could be more "objective" than that. The Underground press on the other hand would have "editorialized" by adding that in October the same Committee heard hours of testimony from law-enforcement officials in open session directly and specifically relating to Rubin's actions in Chicago. This was pointed out by Rubin often and loudly but the Post chose to ignore it.

The above is but a minor example of the fallaciousness of the "objectivity" of the establishment press. When General Westmoreland returned home from Vietnam each few months to announce that "we are winning the war, " "victory is just around the corner, " etc., etc., his pronouncements made page one headlines. Again this was "objectivity" -- the press was merely quoting the good General; how can you argue with that? Tha fact that this was propaganda at its most Southern people as they have done so many times in the past?

A 21 year old boy has been sentenced to 30 years in prison for attempting to bomb the home of a Jewish business:nan in Mississippi. He was characterized as "a self-styled guerrilla waging a 'holy crusade' agains' a 'Communist-Jewish conspiracy". A psychiatrist testified at the trial that the young man "was obsessed with fighting communism" (Wash. Post, Nov. 28).

Another shining example of an individual suffering from the disease that afflicts our society as a whole. The sickest part of it all of course is that had the young man gone to Vietnam he could have gotten a medal for acting out the same obsession.

NARCTURNSON, BUSTS MINORS

Peter Novick

Larry Eliot, the undercover District policeman who arrested over twenty persons in the DuPont Circle area earlier this month, this week busted approximately ten persons in Wilson High School for drug traffic.

Larry, who appeared around the high school in early November, posed as an interested customer for drugs, and made inroads in the school's drug-using population to obtain his information.

Eliot not only solicited drugs openly in the school building, but was a frequent visitor in the homes of several of the young girls, and obtained information by taking the girls out on dates.

One mother of a Wilson High girl called the Washington Free Press and stated that Larry had been to her home. She recognized him from the description appearing in the last issue of the WFP, (#45) and stated that this is what tipped off most of the students.

Although no one at Wilson associated with Larry since the WFP article was printed, Larry had the ten or so students arrested from their conduct during November.

Seven students were taken out of the school in hand-cuffs and taken to the police precinct. Arrests were made on students who had sold marijuana to Larry, after he solicited it from them; for smoking with him, and for possession.

In most instances, Larry arrested people who had smoked with him with the grass he had supplied. He has turned on to marijuana and amphetamines over fifteen minors. One girl stated to the WFP that 'Several times a week Larry would come by the house and bring his own grass and turn me and my sister on. He gave me speed, and smoked hash with us.' This girl was later reported to be wanted by the police for having smoked marijuana.

Larry told several students that he had an unlimited prescription for eskatrol, and turned on young girls frequently to it.

Other students have sworn to the WFP that Larry had, in their presence, "dropped speed, smoked grass and hash."

ONE SIXTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL STATED THAT LARRY, 21,

TOOK HER OUT TO ROCK CREEK PARK, TURNED HER ON TO MARIJAUNA, AND SEXUALLY ASSAULTED HER. SHE SAID THAT IT "WAS VERY COMMON FOR HIM TO GET A GIRL STONED AND THEN TO SEXUALLY AT TACK HER."

Another girl was told by Larry that he was gay (homosexual). The girl became suspicious of Larry after reading the description in the Free Press and when confronting him, was shown his police badge. (A four or five digit number beginning with 522.) Larry then told her that he was planning to bust another high school, either Spingarn or Springbrook.

She was also told by Larry that ''I won't arrest you, because I'm only interested in heroin'', but the next day she was wanted.

Larry has known everyone in Wilson who turns on to drugs, most of whom he himself turned on, later to arrest them. One of the minors he turned on to marijuana was 15 years old.

She then was hauled before the....

When confronted by the description in the Free Press as resembling him, Larry told one girl, "The Free Press is a Communist inspired and run newspaper, and you mustn't believe anything in it." She then offered to take Larry down to the Free Press office to see if he would be identified or not as the narcotic agent, but he turned down her offer.

Since the description was last printed, Larry has cut his hair to a fairly short length, and has stopped wearing his medalion. But he continues to wear expensive hip clothes, and is reported to have a constant supply of money which he used to spend on several girls in Wilson High.

Although he has given several conflicting accounts of his activities, he has related to several Wilson students that he has an apartment which he shares with three girls on 31st Street and M in Georgetown, near the corner; has a home in Maryland with his parents, whose last name is Thomas; and that he is a student at Montgomery Junior College. However, he definitely is a member of the Metropolitan Police Department. He drives a 1968 Camaro, with a stereo tape deck, and usually plays jazz tapes in it. He keeps his wallet with his identification in the trunk of his car, and carries a supply of incense and cigarette papers with him.

All of the Wilson students interviewed by the Free Press also stated that he always has with him at least a dime bag of marijuana.

During the first week in December, another raid resulted fromm Larry Eliot's undercover activities. A commune on Van Ness Street, N.W. was busted after the agent befriended the residents into his confidence. A various assortment of drugs were sold to him in the preceeding months, and the raid occured in the afternoon long after Larry was known to be an agent. The WFP interviewed a member of that circle of friends, and he stated that the Van Ness Street Co-op was clean of drugs when the raid occured.

DISPOSABLE HANDCUFFS

CLEVELAND, OHIO

The cuffs are made of nylon straps and they lock by means of a steel spring. They have to be cut off the prisoner's wrist once attached. A pair of regular cuffs runs about fifty cents. A police lieutenant in Cleveland said that the cuffs are too expensive for mass arrests.

HIGH SCHOOL BILL OF RIGHTS

San Diego, Calif. -- What amounts to a Bill of Rights for high school students: has been proposed by the American Civil Liberties Union in a policy statement on Student Freedom in the Secondary Schools. The ACLU says that students, like their elders, "should have a right to live under the principle of 'rule by law" as opposed to 'rule by personality'."

Among its proposed student rights were the following:

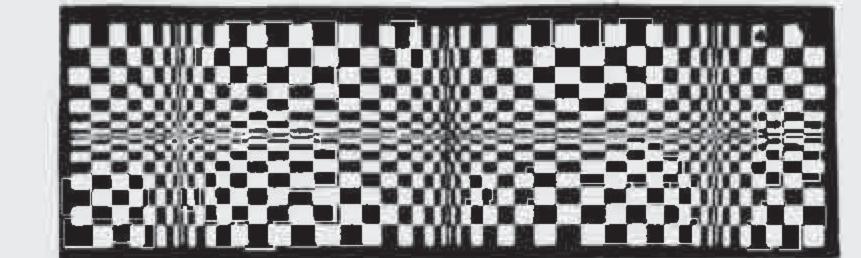

*To organise political groups, hold assemblies and demonstrations, where buttons and armbands with slogans, as long as these do not disrupt classes or school peace (which in fact could use a little disruption).

*To recieve formal hearing, written charges and a right to appeal any serious vilaoation of conduct charge.

*To dress or wear one's hair as one pleases and to attend school while married or pregnant unless these things "in fact" disrupt the educational (!) process.

*To publish and distribute student materials without prohibitions on content unless they

"clearly and imminently" disrupt or are libelous.

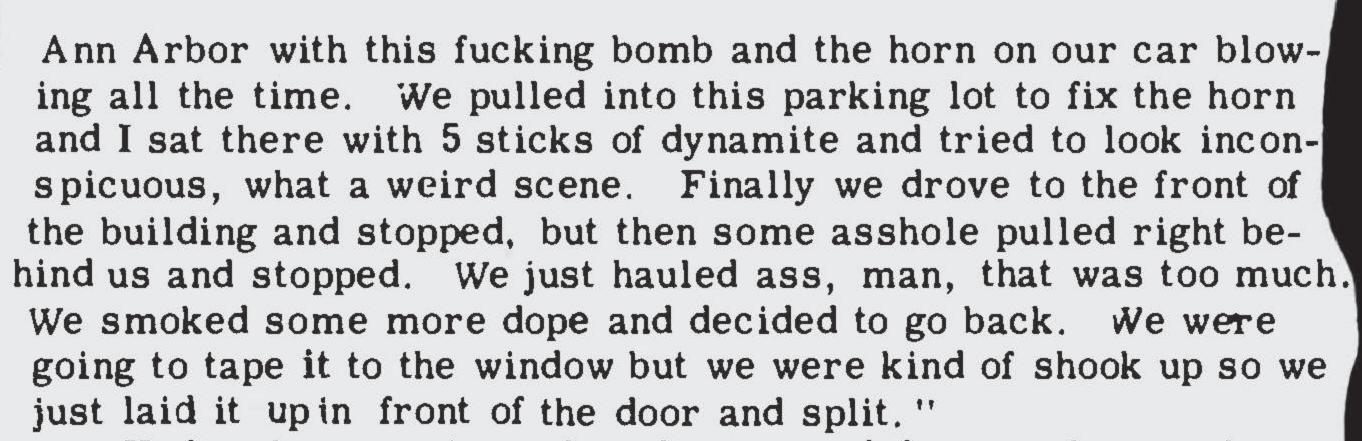

bomber busted

or a eulogy for Ann Arbor Anonymous

That is to say that on November 10 and 11, thirteen people were busted by the Ann Arbor pigs. That is to say that nineteen "John Doe" warrants were issued to get the "Bomber", thirteen were used, with a few held in case of contingencies. They either to tell us something. Then again, perhaps it's all a political treatise on action, being presented by the cops; a court doctorate didn't know ahead of time whom to bust, or perhaps they are trying on definition of social roles.

Under the conspiracy law the accused does not have to have:

1. Done the deed; who is the Mad Bomber anyway?

Been seen doing it or have it proven that he did it;

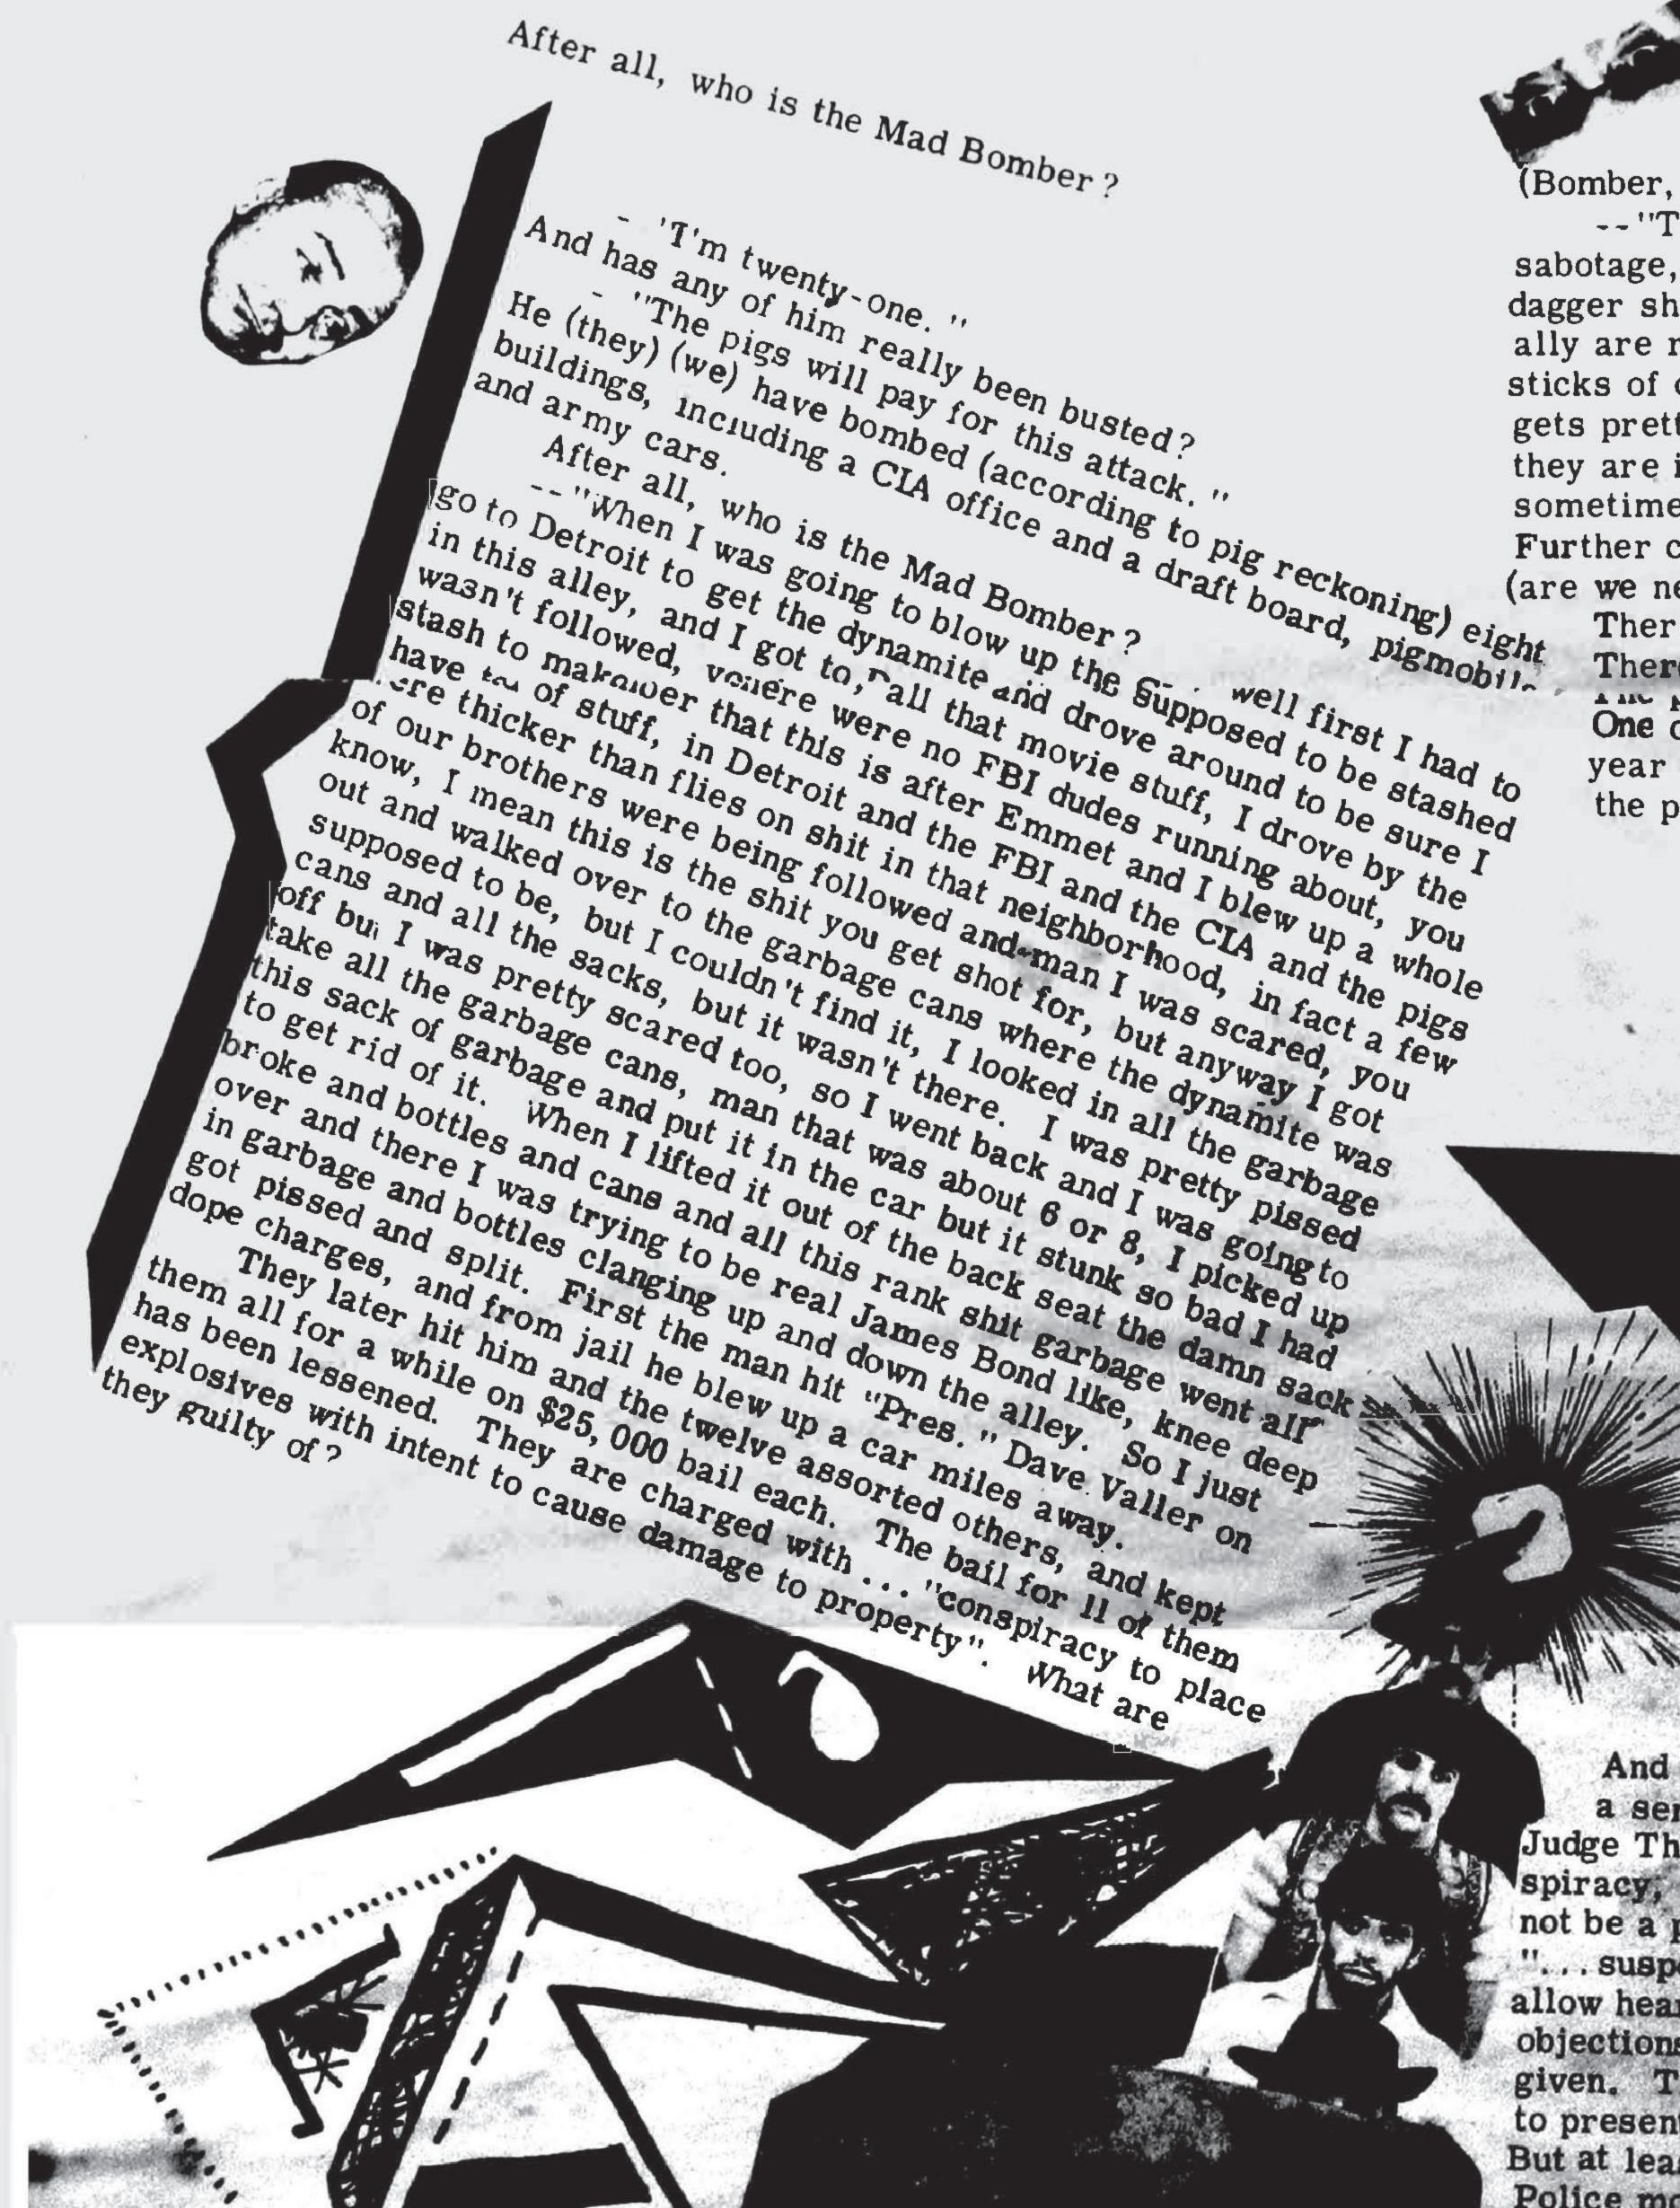

3. There doesn'teven have to be a bombing in the first place.

I mean you really are riding on the back of a motorcycle at 100 mph with 20 sticks of dynamite to go blow something up, you know. And so it gets pretty funny sometimes when you try to do things the way they are in the movies and then you get stuck with some reality, sometimes they both aren't the same. "

Should

Should the Bomber have endangered those.

Policy is the starting point at all the practical actions of a revolutionary party and manifest itself in the process and the end-results of that party's actions. A revolutionary party is carrying out a policy whenever it takes any action. If it is not carrying out a correct policy it is carrying out a wrong policy; if it is not carrying out a policy conciously, it is doing so blindly. What we call experiences is the process and the end-result of carrying out out a policy. Only through the practice of the peoples, that is, through experience, can we verify whether a policy is correct or wrong, and determine to what extent it is correct or wrong. But people's practice, especially the practice of a revolutionary party and the revolutionary masses, cannot but be bound up with one policy or another. Therefore, before any action is taken, we must explain the policy, which we have formulated in the light of the given circumstances, to Party members and to the masses. Otherwise, Party members and the masses will depart from the guidance o our policy, act blindly and carry out a wrong

HOW TO MAKE UP THE BOMB.

"Ah. I'm glad weare getting to something real Well you have ? parts to the bomb. Fuse, blasting cap and sticks. Three feet of fuse will burn for two minutes. You take the fuse and fray the ends, you stick one end in the blasting cap and tape it there, adhesive tape is the best or plastic tape, you know that black shit. Then you tape the blasting cap to 2 sticks of dynamite, then vou just tape on as many sticks as you want, keeping the blasting cap in the middle of the bomb Sometimes you just light it and throw it. but this is bad because you have to be sure the fuse is lit correctly, sparks have to be coming from the fuse "

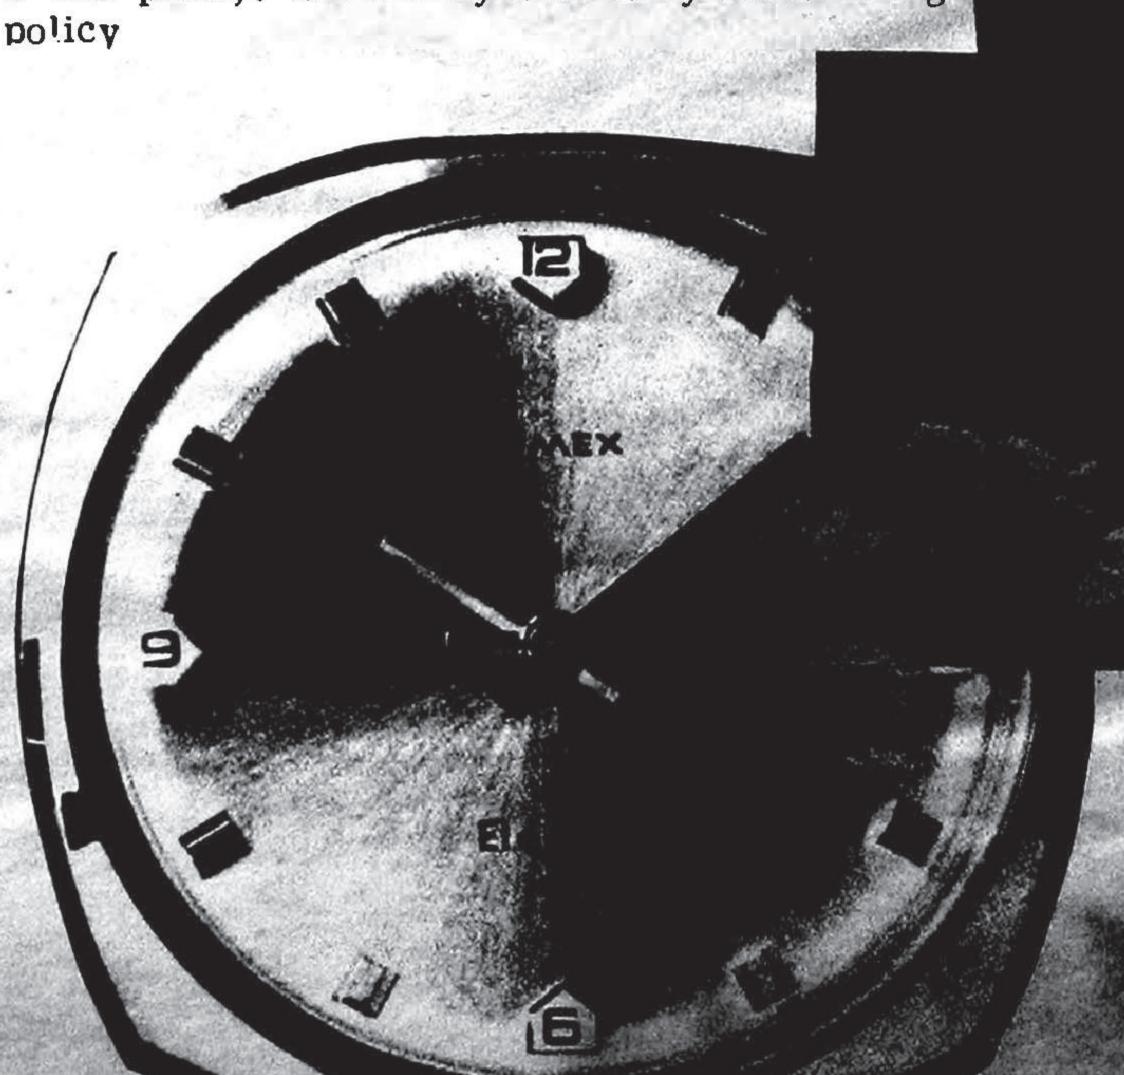

Are you the Mad Bomber ? If so, please send us any info you can on how to make explosives or bombs out of easily obtainable materials (dynamite is registered or is not there at all). By Duggan E. Flanakin

Tired of the U.S. Air Force? Maybe you'd like to join the "Sierra Club".

Last Friday, Dec. 6, Airman Gilbert Sierra was given a General (under Honorable) Discharge by Brigadier General R. A. Knobloch, the base commander at Andrews AFB, Maryland, on the grounds of "apathetic and defective attitude". Sierra has been a G.I. rights activist and founded the Servicemen's Peace and Freedon League.

Sierra's first overt organizing act which brought the pressure of the military brass was a handbill he and a few other airmen passed out at Andrews last October that advertised the League, quoting liberally from the U.S. Constitution and other American documents and expressing opposition to the Vietnam war, racism in the military, and U.S. imperialism.

After a trip to San Francisco where he met Clark Smith, editor of the Ally (anti-war G.I. paper), Lt. Hugh Smith, who organized the October 11 G. I. March in San Francisco that drew over 500 soldiers, and other Bay Area G. I. activists, Sierra began to speak at peace rallies and also debated the war --- d-12- .. -- "CLa-1- you. Tohon (Channel 14).

Sierra was never charged with any offense related to these activities, although it is known that Air Force legal teams worked overtime trying to find seditious or illegal statements or actions. The trouble was that Sierra had done NOTHING ILLEGAL according to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. This fact, known all over the base, has had a strong impact on other GI's who were certain Gil would be locked up forever.

Finally, in desperation, the order came down to hang SOME charge on Gil that would enable his discharge at all costs. He was becoming a_ dangerous symbol of defiance of illegitimate authority. So he was called down for oversleeping four times for 5-10 minutes each during October, which cost him one stripe and a restriction to base. The next day Gil and a buddy walked off base to get some milk and doughnuts; upon returning they were surrounded by five carloads of Air Police who met them with drawn guns. This cost another stripe, but by this time discharge proceedings were already in progress. Sierra, who had acquired a "folk hero" status for his ability to buck the the rast the rest this was and flaunting regulations and spreading the work of his fate among his fellow airmen.

The Andrews brass is now so scared of Sierra that they issued him with a letter of expulsion from the base five minutes after his discharge. This means that Gil, like several other civilians who had leafletted Andrews (and other bases) advertising G. I. Week (Nov. 1-5), cannot go on the base without receiving up to a $500 fine and up to two years in jail. But Sierra has indicated he will stay in the D.C. area to do G.I. organizing. And the word is that four of Gil's cohorts in the League are being processed -- others may be kicked out

The following is an exerpt from a speech Gil had read for him at the Nov. 2 anti-election rally at Lafayette Park, while he was on base restriction:

"Once again the Military Establishment has succeeded in denying me the human rights under the Constitution that they

NONREGISTRATION CONFERENCE

Young men from all over the East Coast will gather in Philadelphia on Dec. 27-29 for a conference on nonregistration and noncooperation. Discussions on history of the draft and nonregistration, theory and application of nonregistration, noncooperation and nonviolence, and family and community reactions to draft refusal, among other topics. Participants will need sleeping equipment and meal money; those interested should send name, address, age and brief statement of why attending conference to Pcacemakers, c 'o Wally Nelson, 3810 Hamilton St., Phila., Pa. 19104. The conference will run from 7 P.M., Fri., the 27th of Dec., through Sun. afternoon, the 29th, at The Back Bench, 32 Fortieth St., Philadelphia.

Mark Rudd of the Columbia SDS Strike Committee filed an appeal for a II-A deferment on the grounds that his occupation, a revolutionary, is vital to the national interest. He was reclassified I-A in late October. In a statement he said that if he is forced to enter the Army, he will, and "will continue organizing within the Army as I have done outside, since my life is committed to the revolutionary movement." Rudd has been given a 30-day stay of induction while the local board considers this new evidence.

CUBAN JOURNAL

Note: Michele Clark travelled to Cuba in Sept for Liberation News Service at the invitation of the Cuban government. This is the first part of her journal, the rest of which will appear in following issues of Free Press.

> Letter One Midnight

Dear Joel.

Washington DC

Yesterday I thought for sure the trip was cancelled. Today it's on again. I doubt very much, though, that we will ever reach Cuba. At least I'll be able to turn in a first-hand, human interest report on life in a Mexican prison.

In the past two weeks a group of Panthers and a seperate group of Lawyer's Guild folk, both on their way to Cuba, were arrested by Mexican authorities, held 72 hours incommunicado and then escorted to airplanes heading for the States. People from the West Coast landed in Wichita and vice versa. With any luck, I will realize my lifelong dream to visit Helena, Montana.

We expect, you see, the same treatment. We'll be arriving in Mexico City the day before a massive students' and workers' march. Something like 50 people have already been killed. However, the word from the Cuban folks in New York is, "We'll do our best but you go at your own risk" -- so we have decided to try it.

There will be 37 of us going, from all over the country, plus Chevara Lynn Orrin, Sue Orrin's five-month-old daughter. Too large a group. Everyone laughs when I tell them I'm going with 37 other people and taunt me with panoramas of flower-shirted American tourists. "And there's mother in front of the Grand Coulie Dam!" Hopefully, probably, we'll travel around in small groups.

Cuba. Rick Margolies, another member of the S Street co-op, asks: "Why are you people so interested in Cuba and not Yugoslavia?" He asks this pointedly and meansoh, you people (me) are entranced by the romance of revolution, by Che, by the Guerrillas--but you're not really scrious, because if you were, you'd study Yugoslavia's technological decentralization. Yugoslavia, he says, is much more similar to the US than Cuba is.

He's right, I suppose. I grant him immediately the accusation that many SDS people are too "entranced" by violence, the revolutionary stance, the mouthing of slogans, the egotrip of it all. I give in to it sometimes myself, though I'm aware of the stance and try to avoid it, avoid believing it. But then, you might say, this is one of the questions I am asking of the trip, of Cuba: What does the third world, realistically, mean to me? Since I'm no about to become a mountian fighter or even an urban guerrilla (at least not for the next few years), what is the meaning of Che or Debray or any of it, for me?

But I haven't answered Rick's question. For one thing, Cuba is the only socialist county nearby. Yugoslavia is far away and expensive to visit. If you are interested in what socialism communism is like and don't have much money -- see Cuba. Second there is the romance of a new revolution -- a revolution which was possible and then succeeded. Where people are mentally and spiritually recreating themselves in their own image. Third, I do not think that a revolution in the USA could use Cuba as a model -- so I'm not looking for that -- for a model for North America. I am looking for the mental changes, I suppose, the personal changes people have undergone -- if I can find in a month.

It's a question and it seems important to me. I don't know how many people think this way. Few, I would imagine. But I have never talked it out with anyone so I dont know. It might also be that the community which comprises the Movement is the only real community I will ever know, here in fragmented America. And if this community -- made up of those I love and work beside -- were to be destroyed. I would want to be destroyed with it. And if I were not, I would feel that I had betrayed those who have shared, do share, will share, everything with me.

The difference is, however, that us commies want everyone to have a community, and see ours as a means to that end. See ours as unsafe, unsound, and in a way impossible, while we are alienated and living under capitalism, the rule of property and the few who own it. This is another long dialogue Rick and I have had from time to time. He thinks it's possible to drop out, build your own society, always involving others, but seperating yourself from capitalism, materialism and egoism. Bullshit. But I cant explain to him yet why this seems to clearly be imo s in for me. This utopian communitarianism. And that's another question I want to ask of Cuha

I will see you in a week or a month. Venceremos and love,

Michele

BURNABY, BRITISH COLUMBIA -- Students of Simon Frazer University occupied the administration building Nov. 20 after their demands, which included opening of admin-Istration files, greater student money for the B.C. public education system, went unheeded. During the day guerrilla teach-ins were held in classes. That evening, 500 students showed up at the faculty senate meeting, stated their demands, which were rejected, and finally moved to the administration building, which they voted to hold. A town meeting of the student body overwhelmingly supported the occupation, after the toy student government had voted against them. The occupation continued through Nov. 23, when the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were called in. The bust count was 114. GUAYAQUIL, ECUADOR

Armed workers liberated the offices of the U.S.-owned Cafe Robusta coffee estate and captured the American manager and accountant. This came as the result of the low wages offered to the workers on the estate owned by the U.S. firm NarFarms of Ecuador, whose major stockholder is Nelson Rockefeller and the Chase Manhattan Bank. More than 120 armed police assisted by a helicopter, and two planes are engaged in a search for the two executives.

SAIGON -- "Two hearts, a right lung, and a liver. Got 'em. O.K., call in the med copter", said Captain Red Merci, member of the special surgical team -- Salvage One -- which recently began operating in the Mekong Delta.

Operation Salvage, explained Capt. Merci, is the American Medical Association's answer to the transplant donor shortage.

"We see today an unprecedented demand for surplus human vital organs", said Capt. Merci. "My associates and I tackled the demand by searching for the highest fatality per square mile ratio in the world. Finding it, we theorized, would yield the most economical means of obtaining high demand organs from donors whose physical condition makes moot the question of permission."

While cleaning his field scalpel, Capt. Merci continued, "We rejected Biafra and India as areas of operation because deficient dist left the prospective organs in poor condition. Vietnam was more our meet."

According to Capt. Merci the procedure for procuring the organs is this. "When we run across a KIA (killed in action), or a soldier who in our judgment has less than a 50-50 chance of living, we call HQ to find out what organs are on the strategic need list.

Then we perform surgery.

Fortunately, our expenses are low since we don't need any of the normal operating room facilities -- blood, anesthesia, sterile compresses, you know, the whole works. Next, we radio in the med copter, chill the 'piece' as we call it, and jet the thing back to the States in just under eight hours. And presto, we've saved a life."

AMA spokesman in Washington, D.C. are already expanding the concept of Operation Salvage. 'Just recently we acquired three mother bodies into which we can transplant any spare organs sent from salvage team one", said Dr. Bleau Kross, Chief of the AMA Bureau at Walter Reed Hospital. 'The mother bodies' brains have been destroyed either through stroke or accident, the nerve centers have been pithed, and for all practical purposes the bodies would be dead if it weren't for our maintenance. But, as they are, the mother bodies provide excellent growth mediums. "

So far, Operation Salvage has provided more organs than there has been a need for, and as Dr. Kross explains, "Our big problem is the doubling up. In some bodies we have six or seven lungs more than 200 feet of intestine, extra spleens, everything that you can think of. But, we hope to solve that soon."

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA. -- Four members of the Florida Free Press staff were busted last month for possession of grass and obscene material (the Freep). They spent 3 1/2 days in jail until eventually released on $2,000 bail each. The obscenity, based on the objections of the deputy sheriff's wife, was a cartoon strip that said "fucking family". After an extensive search one alleged marijuana seed was produced. A squad of 15 cops, some with riot guns, made the bust, much of which was televised for those type people. The Freep had been recently revived after the staff gave up because of

-- Hip sociologists on the staff of the Chicago study team of Johnson's Commission on Violence, wanted a free-swinging, rough-talking report that seemed to be on the side of the kids and against the cops. The team leaders agreed, on the theory that by using movement vernacular, they would give insurgent forces the sense that the Establishment was coming around to their position.

One Jack Susman, a sociologist at GW University, a member of the study group, in the furtherance of his duty, placed an ad in the Washington Free Press telling participants in the Chicago demonstrations to fight back by telling the Commission how it really was. It appears that the pictures and reports already available don't prove anything.

However, top pig J.
Edgar Hoover was outraged.
He demanded an apology, but Susman's letter in return was merely an explanation: to get the confidence of the kids, use their vernacular. But Hoover was not impressed by this cooption theory. And Susman was fired.

NEW YORK -- This city witnessed yet another school strike earlier this month. Not a teacher strike. A high school strike. The teachers racked up seven weeks of strike time and now that they are back they want to make up lost time by cutting down on days off and extending the school day 45 minutes. Friday after Thanksgiving would have been a holiday, and for some it was. 1,000 students stood in front of Van Buren High and shouted "NO!" 47% of New York's 300,000 high school students boycotted classes.

1,500 students rallied in Greenwich Village's Washington Square, Monday, Dec. 2. They took the subway to the Ocean Hill-Brownsville school district in Brooklyn, over which the teacher strike was precipitated, to show their support. The cops got uptight and charged the students, hoping to engage in a free-for-all beating. But they # picked the wrong crowd. They # were greeted with rocks and bottles.

By Tuesday, everyone knew the strike demands: eliminate the extra 45 minutes school time, the extra school days, and give the students power over decisions that will affect them. 1,500 students liberated a subway station in Brooklyn. Lane High was picketed by 400 of its black students. Another subway station was liberated by 200 students.

One of the participants said that the TPF (Tactical Police Force) pigs sealed off the students in the 4th Street Station (Dylan?) for over an hour while they prepared a good old TPF (the regular city pigs call them the 'bone crushers") welcome at Ocean Hill.

Things ready, the students' train, under escort, was allowed to proceed. The students upon arriving at Ocean Hill, expecting to be part of a peaceful rally in support of the local school board, found instead "two batallions" of ichy clubed pigs. The observer told the Free Press that "without notice or provocation, the pigs charged the singing students. Many students were chased and clubed in the streets. Many students responded by attacking (!) back and attempting to defend themselves with garbage can covers and bricks."

THE N.Y. STUDENTS CAME IN GLORY--and there were many more

The rain slowed down the action on Wednesday. The authorities began to react with repression. A state of emergency was declared. About 75 students were arrested, many suspended, administrators made announcements about proper channels and punishment and 60 truant officers were sent to "key" schools.

What will it take for the city educators to realize that the issue is not the extra 45 minutes -- it's the whole fucking system.

In Harlem, the controversy over teacher job entrenchment versus local control of schools continues centered around Public School 39. The local governing board has removed eight union teachers from their assignments and the city board refuses to recognize this right, so the teachers have been attending school with police escort. The result has been a student-parent-teacher sit-in.

The Ocean Hill-Brownsville District continues its battle for autonomy from the bureaucratic and inefficient teity school board. Rhody McCuy. #the local administrator, defied ta court order to submit a plan to the city for the reopening of *Junior High School 271. McCoy *says that the 1,700 pupil school will be reopened by him without interference from higher up.

Arlington, Va. -- David goes to Williamsburg Junior High in Arlington and works at a gas the after ashed I met him there yesterday cause I had to have a flat fixed. When he opened thing. (Illusion: the act of the trunk to get the spare he found a bundle of the last issue of the Free Press. I told him that I worked for the Free Press and he told me that a friend of his brother's had been expelled for selling the rag.

Mike, David's older brother attends Bishop D. J. O'Conell High. I talked with him by phone He seemed to be bored with it all, and a little scared too. But he told me the story.

Mike and David have a friend-Bill. He is 16 and must be quite a guy. He had bought the Free Press on occassional trips to Georgetown. Early in December he decide to sell the paper at his school. Most of the students have never seen it before) (!) (and still haven't but they have heard). He bought * 25, maybe 50 papers and took the then to school one morning. He was able to sell twenty papers, the last one to Mike. before school officials took his papers from him, and sent him home, and told him not to come back to school anymore after the celebration of Christ's birth. (It's a catholic school).

The excuses for the action was that Bill's grades were not at all what they should be.

Bill's mother burned the Free Press. When I spoke with her she was barely able to control her rage. It was all the fault of this "smutty rag(!)" and her son would never be allowed to sell it again.

And now there is a movement afoot in the school. There is even talk that the students will march on the principal's office and demand somedemanding anything from a 6foot, 3-dimensional, blackshrouded symbol of authority.)

The students haven't moved yet. But maybe they will. And they should. And they must.

Choose one: (A) The hardest house to clean up is your own; (B) Perhaps all the students uptight about the school authority's actions should get together and rap *about what to do (give us or SDS a call); (C) Put out an underground newspaper or newsletter (it's easy, cheap; #fun, dangerous, satisfying, and the Free Press will help); (D) If you don't act you're a nig too. (E) All of these.

TIME PASSED

I finally talked to Bill. The students did act. They marched on the principal's office; hundreds went to rallies after school.

The school finally relented. Bill can stay there, minus his long hair. The reason: it seems that the WFP was such a hot item that six teachers helped Bill sell the paper. Rather than appear unjust, the school kept Bill and the teachers too.

As for Bill, he digs the Free Press and thinks it should be sold at high schools. He has a brown belt in karate. He told me that people usually don't put him down.

HAYAKAWA LEIED

S.I. Hayakawa, California's newest nigger has been showing his colors at San Francisco State College, where he was appointed Acting President by a secret (therefore illegal under California law) meeting of the trustees. For the last couple of weeks he has been suspending students without due process, denying professors tenure, ripping up sound equipment at rallies, openly and loudly insisting on ". . . hot for you" police tactics on campus, and passing out blue armbands to those dedicated to good behavior and the "right of the majority to dissent from the protest strike of the minority." Last week, when it became obvious that force would not in itself calm the students down, he was forced to lift the suspensions against the strikers. Meanwhile, the Japanese Americans have disowned him (". . . he never has been a member of our community") and the Young Americans for Freedom had to import some girls from Hawaii to give him moral support and to place a lei around his neck. Ah, symbolism!

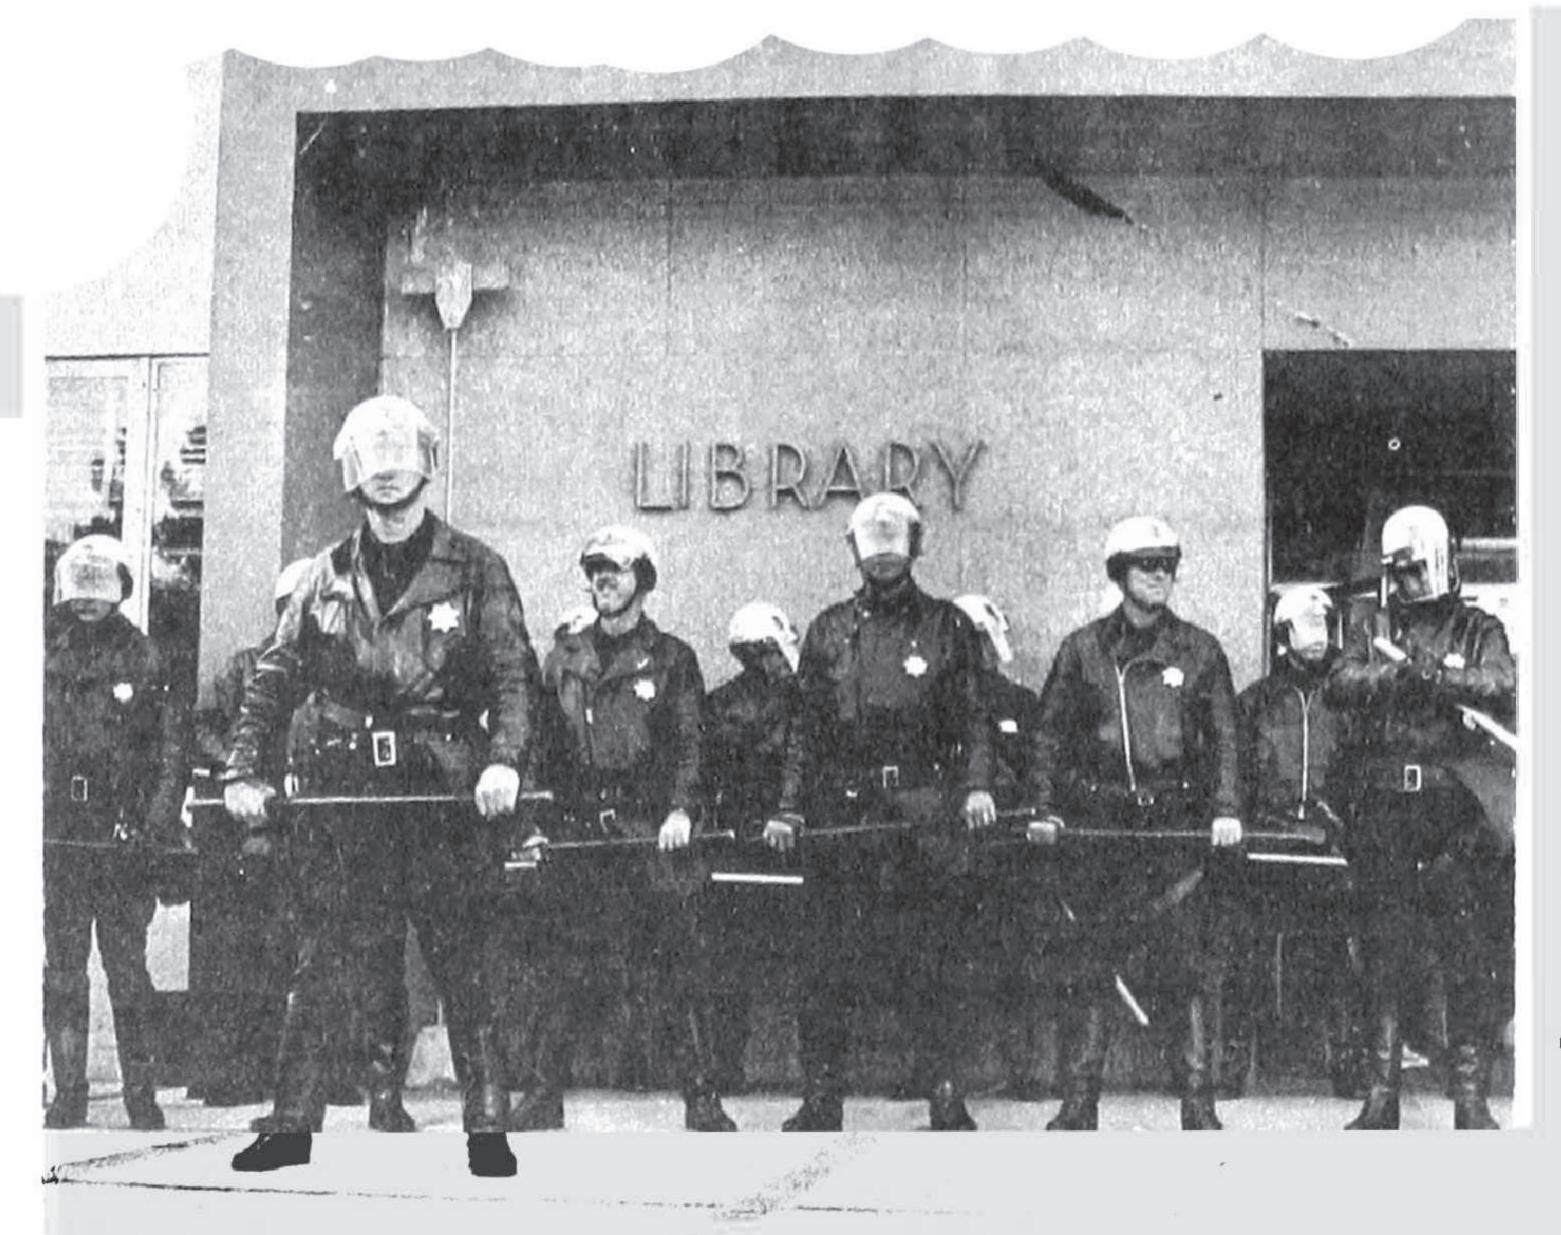

UNIVERSITY OF INDI-ANA -- 50 students held a classroom sit-in to protest the presence of CIA recruiters.

KENT STATE COLLEGE, OHIO -- The administration has granted full amnesty to black students engaged in a boycott, saying: "We want them back." The boycott, which developed into a student-run University in Exile, grew out of a sit-in against recruiters from the Oakland Police Department, the threat of administrative discipline, and a walk-out by 400 of the 597 black students.

ARIZONA STATE UNIV. -- Over 300 students, two laundry workers, and several professors (!!) occupied the administration building again demanding that the University cancel its contract with a laundry firm known to exploit black and Spanish-American workers.

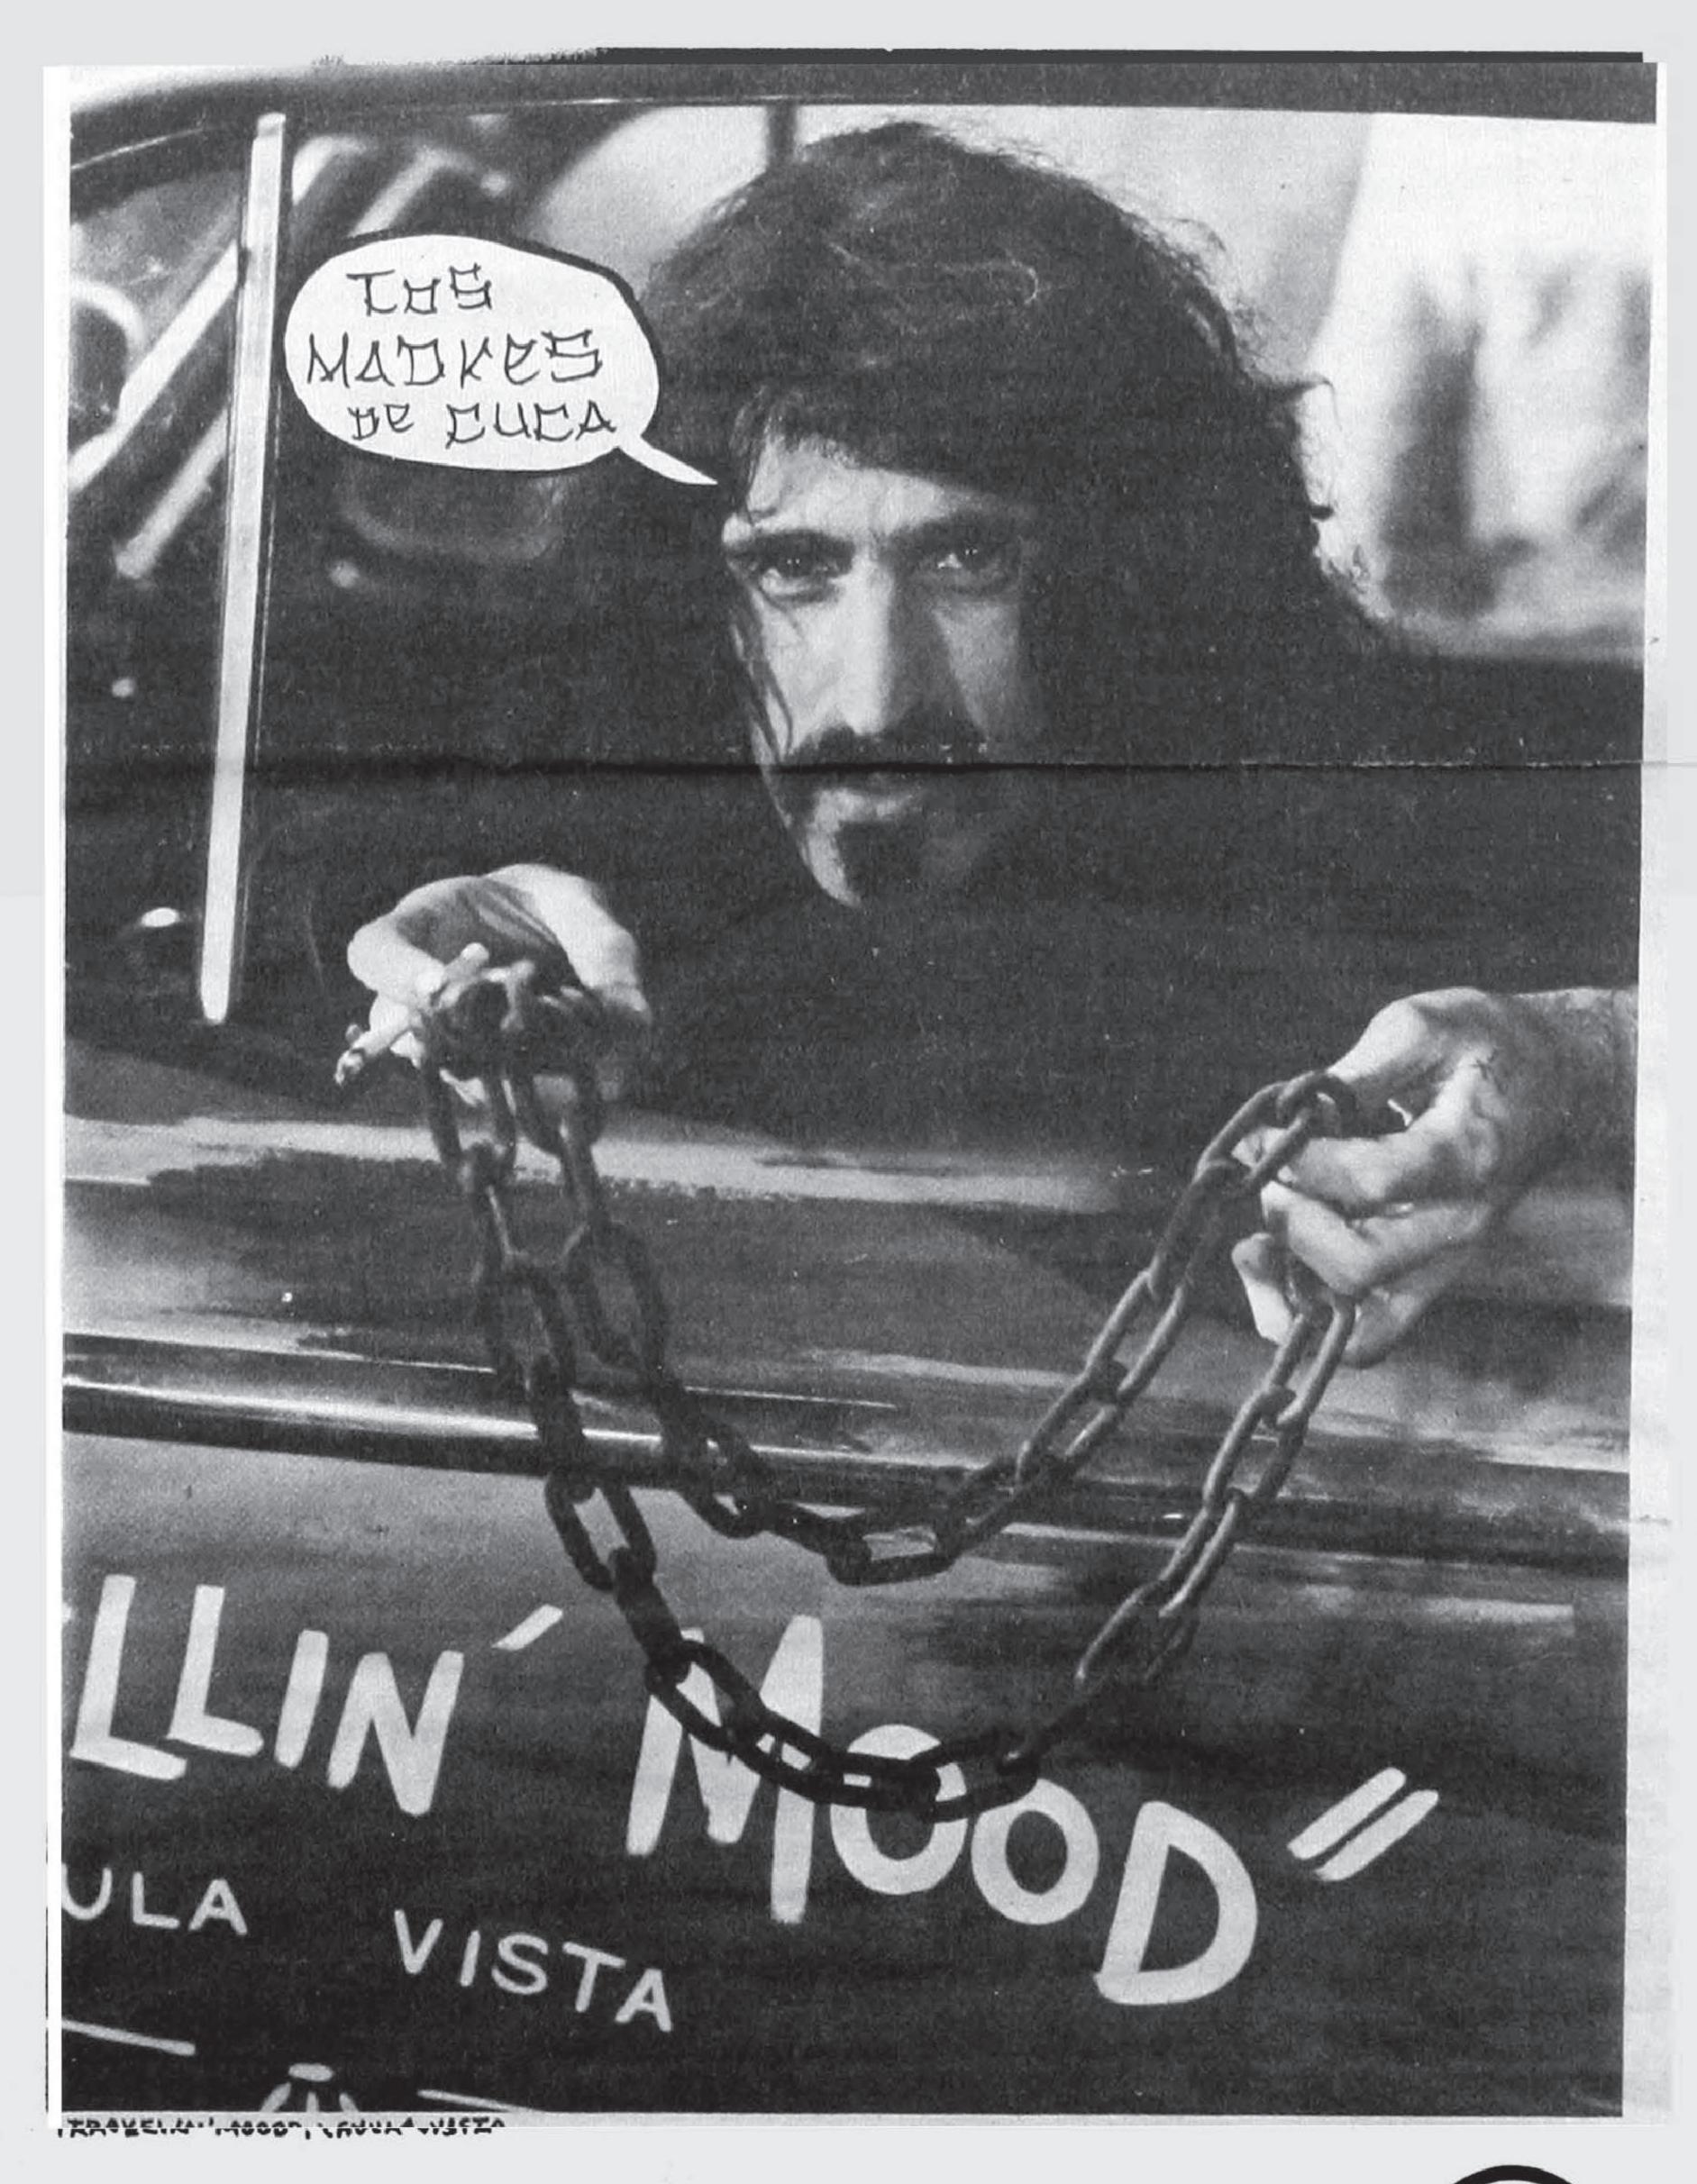

OSHKOSH STATE UNIV., WISC. -- A federal judge has put the administration on the spot by ordering the university to reinstate 94 students suspended after a demonstration or file charges against them. The university has responded by sending the students a notice of a Dec. 16 hearing.

NORTHWESTERN UNIV. -- Last November, a State Department man came here to deliver a lecture on the U.S. role in development of postwar Southeast Asia. In the middle of this lecture the lights went out, the audience began chanting "up against the wall, mother-fucker", and the lecturer was hit in the face with two cream pies. It took twenty minutes to get the lights back on.

ATLANTA UNIV. --What began as a protest demanding the resignation of a faculty member who insulted a black student turned into total boycott of classes and exams, sit-ins, and campuswide rallies and marches. Students at Clark, Spelman and Morris Brown colleges won numerous demands including abolition of compulsory class attendance, dress codes, curfew for chicks, and compulsory chapel (!). Spelman students who began the strike won representation on thirteen of fourteen faculty committees.

THE WINDLE OF

TAR TH

One of our lesser known friends in the seed system offers itself as exponent of our expose. The seed in particular is the Hawaiian Rose Wood Seed. This incredible drug is part of a most bizarre looking plant, a rose plant that is made out of wood. In fact, it is hard to believe that this plant is not an artificial creation from Japan. Instead, it is a real creation from Hawaii. The seeds are about an inch in diameter, with about three to four seeds affixed in the center of the petals. The leaves are a crisp, light brown, imperfect looking aggregation with an equally unreal looking stem. However, to attain the desired state of mind, we discard the petals until after we are stoned.

Approximately thirteen seeds will get you to the proper high, with using any number in excess of this reaching a point of diminishing returns. Take the seeds and place them between the sheets of a newspaper, and smash them thoroughly with a hammer. Crush the rosewood seeds until they are nothing more than a sandy, gritty powder. In this stage, they look amazingly like morning glory seeds in an equally crushed up fashion. From this decimated mixture, a tea must be made, so place the contents into a saucepan and boil for about ten to fifteen minutes. If in the region that you live in, you have hard water (that is, with metallic ions, or ammonium or other radical equivalents, then boil a little longer. Let the water steep for up to half an hour, since the active ingredient is not exceptionally soluble in water.

If you observe the sands while they cook, you will see an oily exution emerging from them. This contains the drug that will get you high, and doing a proper job in the kitchen will insure that the alkaloid will be efficiently solutized

Let the tea cool, and then drink it. The taste is a cross between morning glory and mate(to be discussed in firther editions). Flavwere doing rosewood seeds. It was as if we were looking at the beautiful spectacle of polarized crystals under a microscope and not being conscious of the man-made instrument we needed to observe them with. It is as if you forget that the food we eat enables us to live. Drugs are merely a tool, and not the end in itself.

Imagine walking through Washington, and not being conscious of man-made streets, buildings, or cars, but only of nature. You see each tree as a distinct unit of life, the sun as your father, the sky as a field to run through, and the earth as a flowing, loving benefactor.

This is how it is; you become not a person who live at a certain address and performing a certain job, you are a Man an Animal, a Male, Life, and you feel a definite kinship with all forms of life; particularly plant life. (This is because plants are more easily observed, and are stationery in their environment.) You feel with your senses as if the information reported by them is really important! This breaks sharply with all the too typical Twentieth Century American outlook only relying on your sense of sight The sense of smell in this nation is practically considered obscene and perish the social life of any midcentury American who as well as being seen by his girl friend, is also smelled. In grassy fields removed from man's cities we, as the only people for perhaps fifteen miles, felt the cool, damp grass as being alive. We felt the running, living stream. We heard the birds, we heard the swaying of trees and the wind; we smelled the perfume of the wild herbs and fruit. We tasted fresh watercrest from the pond, and fresh apples asif they were created to be eaten, not by man, but by animals. We were divorced from packaged, processed food; animals oring the tea with liberal amounts of honey or other monosuccaride will both improve the flavor and compensate for the energy that you will be metabolizing.

Rosewood seeds are different from the other drug mentioned by Fooman in that the high in this particular chemical in not an overwhelming, engulfing experience. The mind reacts very subtly to it, and if you follow the leads of your perception, then the trip will be astounding. If, as too many people are inclined to do, sit back and say I'm onrosewood seeds, why am I not tripping?", you will never attain the full benefit of the drug. In fact, the power of your mind is what is dominant here, and if you question the drug's workings, that energy will go into totally negating the trip.

So rosewood seeds give you a subtle trip that is truly of the highest essence of the psychedelics: in that the benefit derived is a direct function of your own mind. It gives a trip in the sense that psilocybin, mescaline, and LSD effect you. But unlike LSD, which at most forces your mind to be altered in perception and into exploring, rosewood seeds do their thing to a mind seeking nature.

Coming on, the drug causes you to notice and listen. You senses are magnified, but not in the sense of hallucinations. The first time Fooman took these amazing fruit he was in the Ozark mountains in Arkansas, a location that is a trip without drugs. Driving into the haunted countryside in late fall, the group, which had each drunken about fifteen seeds, saw as a group the power of God before our eyes. The soil, which normally has a light brown color that time of year, soon became a fiery red of rich clay, the blood of the earth in her time of change. The sun was setting to our left, and caused the shadows to intensify the topography of the land. We saw the red earth flow as if it were liquid. The Ozarks, being mountainous countryside, was opened before our collective eyes as a living, breathing body upon which we were the welcome parasites.

Each leaf was distinct on each tree, and as the colors were contrasts with each other, an infinite variety of golden leaves appeared, instead of a uniform golden color; every red leaf became a distinct entity. Trees became individual incarnations of animalistic Every-man. It was as if we were seeing nature for the first time. A river which we stopped to look at was the originator of life, we could see the plant life emerging as from the watery semen of God. Rocks were fortresses of impregnable mystery that we felt we knew.

If you have not eaten anything else for the last seven or so hours than the maximum effect of the seeds will strike you.

Rosewood seeds come on gradually. We were getting more stoned as each hour passed, but at this point we forgot that we killed by slaughter houses, and preservatives added to vegetables. We were eating life to sustain life.

Rosewood seeds are beautiful. Not only do you sense the world as it really is, and not as man pretends to make it, but this new awareness gives the Emotion of Freedom. Not had we sensed everything passively, in an intellectual manner of observers; but we felt Love for Nature. Our emotions were at their zenith. Thusly, did we feel free. We ran across fields and rolled in shoulder-high grass. We waded into the stream barefoot, and we were free! There is no captivating a man when his mind is free. Death became to us a transitory stage where upon we would be dispersed and return as other life. This is not an interesting philosophy -- it is reality.

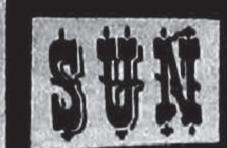

Just as the apples we ate became life in our bodies, so do our bodies become fruit for future life.

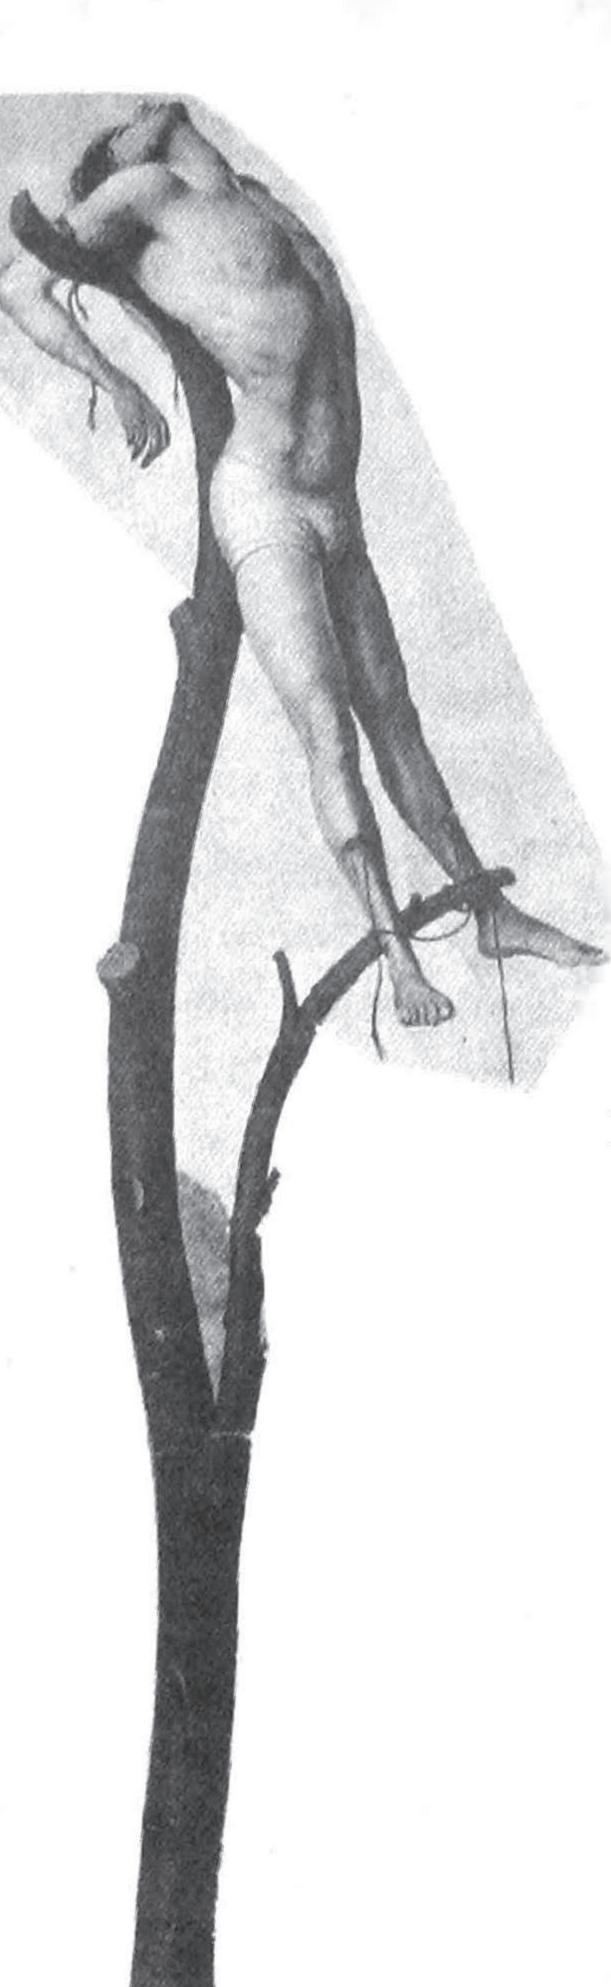

And we were free! We were in our own environment, and we relished it. This freedom brought on another important aspect of the rosewood high, the feeling of Religion. Not the religion of the cathedrals in Rome, or of Sumae Theologica but of knowing that as life you are God. We were part of God, since God is everything, and as God we were unique, yet identical to the trees, rivers and rocks. We not only enjoyed and loved God, but we Knew it. We knew that we were one with the life around us. And if we were God, and all life and non-life were God, how could we do anything but love all men, animals, plants, and things? Yes, rosewood seeds bring on the Religious experience, but unlike the other psychedelics like LSD and marijuana, rosewood seeds open this insight everytime Fooman did rosewood seeds every day throughout the months of October and November 1967, and most of December. He remembers vividly the experience, and of all the drugs that I have talked about so far, this is one that is definitely in the Must category. If you believe as I do that great mental, physical, and spiritual benefits may be obtained from drugs, then Rosewood seeds are the essence of that philosophy.

Drink it like water -- you can't take too much. To obtain this gift from God, merely order them through seed distributors. There are many such companies in the yellow pages. The most economical way is to order a gross or two and stock up for the winter.

You will find that rosewood seeds bring out a common consciousness in men, and that the wonders of the infinite are yours, because you are part of that miracle.

The Talking Machine

Magic of the human voice Descends from out of voids The choice To speak what need be said We huddled between The talking machine.

The sound of men Who long are dead Recorded for us What they said A soul encaptured On plastic discs We all agreed With the talking machine.

It spoke of wisdom It gave us song It had such presence It couldn't be wrong We sat there slowly Soon a throng Of children At the talking machine.

A wiseman said it was not true That dead men cannot Talk to you But here before out startled ears The talking machine machine Erased our fears.

They said the war had burnt up towns Far away I heard no sounds Of people crying, dying, dead, We only heard The machine instead. Peter Novick

Not Yet Too Late

Sunset On the leafless street People Eyeing who they meet Stillness Sealing each man's fate Yet it is not too late.

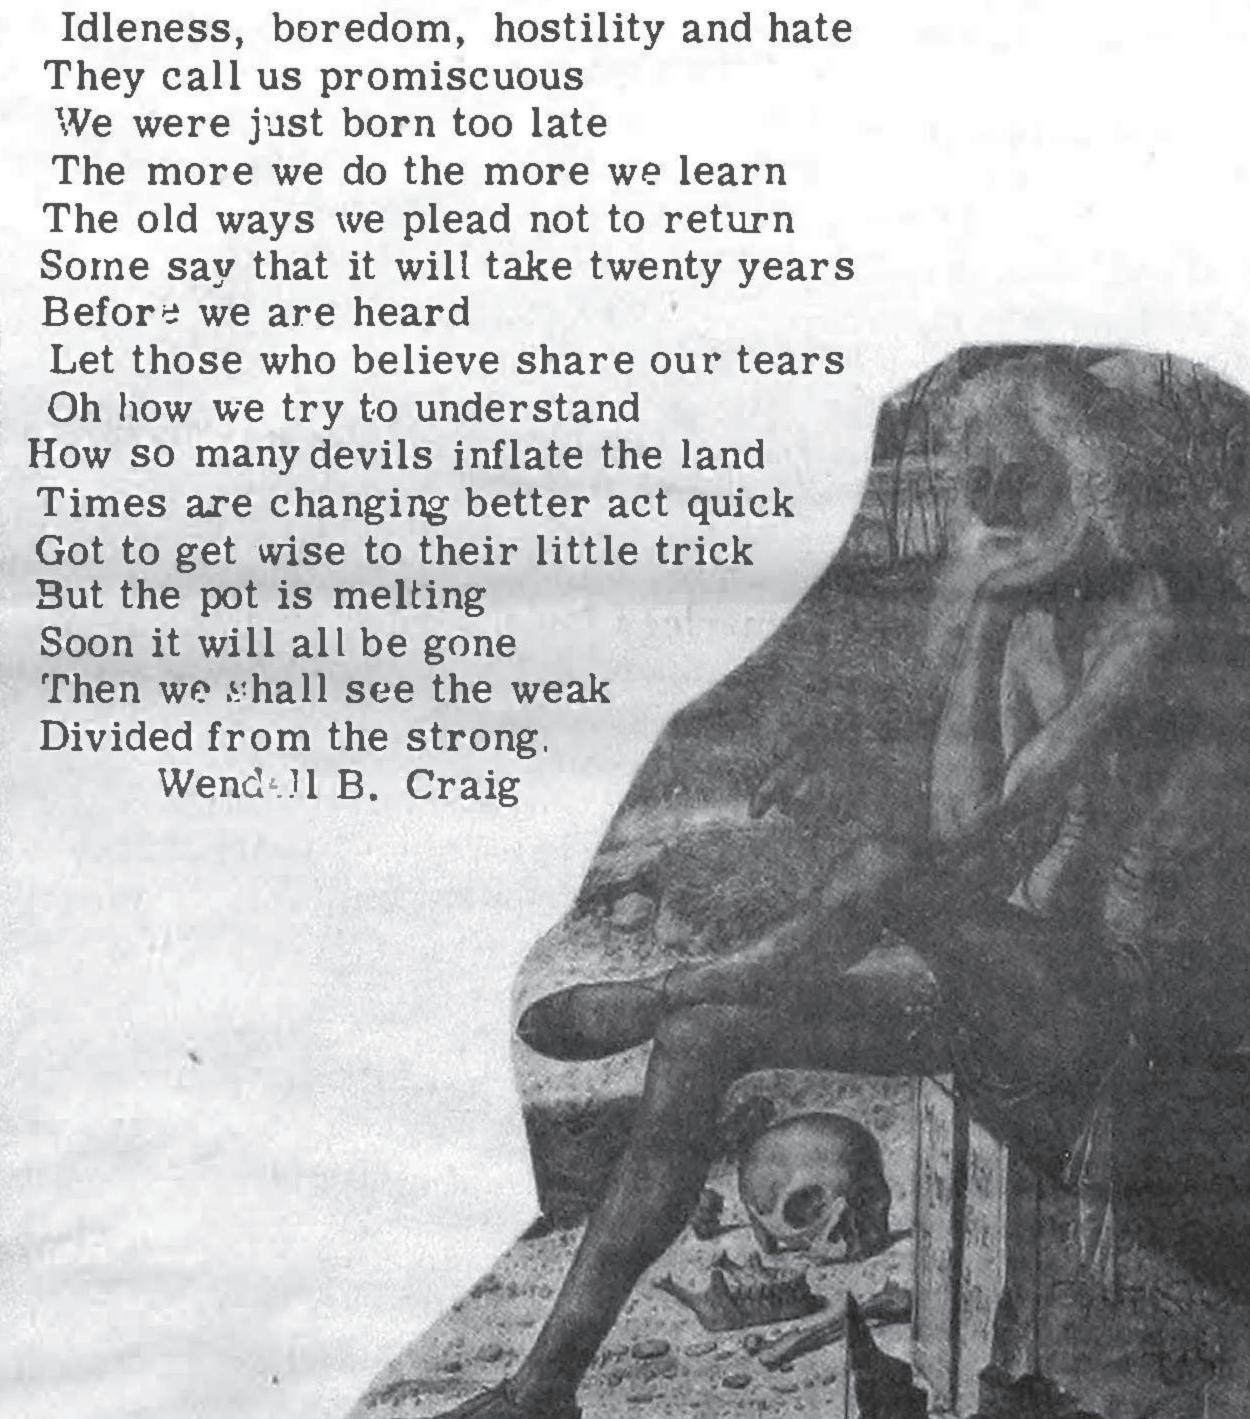

Trying Hard to touch the soul Reaching For that forgotten goal Yet The starlight still seems straight It seems it is not yet too late.

I told her What she wanted to hear Yet there scemed To be a fear That what I said Had still the trait Of denying that it was too late.

Alone I sit enjoying peace That descends before The final lease Is broken by unwitting hands The time has sifted With the sands.

Freedom's Call

KNOCK ON MY MIND WHEN YOU'RE READY

"The time has come, " you speak with ease, And yet to say to me--me, With ear attuned to ready praise--"To speak of your lady."

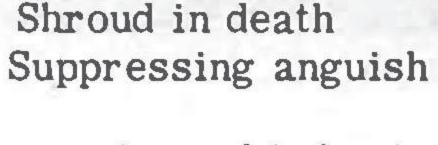

"What is a woman but respite," And I was drunk, but he drunker still. I wanted to talk of my poetry. "You speak of my woman .-- what of?"

So it was he spoke to me most candidly, "A woman is to women known, a man to other men." That was all. And he sat still, He who spoke most eloquently.

(And candidly, a thing most rare.) I saw it then, and remembered The walking of red hills in dense night, With amber cloud formations all

About my forehead, and the chill cold Of the winter's night against my fingers And of knowing, at home's arrival I could tell all, I could tell all.

And realizing -- if I could, -- the little Woman's reception upon my entrance. I could tell all, but all but all. And if I did speak but only softly. Noni Emerson

Every California grape

Jon Saperstein

The strike by Mexican-American grape pickers is now thirty-nine months in progress, while the Washington boycott of California grapes is but four months old. Despite the tentative successes of both efforts, the frustrations and failures of the movement have eclipsed its limited progress. The Johnson Administration's lack of support for the Mexican-American farm workers' demands for decent wages and the right of collective bargaining has been more than equaled by the city liberals' apathetic response to the boycott.

The strike and boycott did receive verbal endorsement from many among the Liberal Establishment, both nationally and locally. National leaders, Walter Reuther and Hubert Humphrey, as well as William Faunteroy and Channing Phillips have expressed support for the Mexican-Americans, but have failed to manifest their words in actions. The Johnson-Humphrey Administration has likewise failed to implement existing laws which could provide decent wages and working conditions, as well as the right of collective bargaining, for the striking Mexican-Americans. Federal authorities have approved, by their silence, such illegal procedures as the importation of strike breakers and the alteration of labeling, by California grape growers seeking to circumvent the boycott. The unions, except in New York and Boston, have not been receptive to proposed slowdown of deliveries to food distributors who stock grapes. The consequence of this flurry of rhetoric and inaction has been to shackle the Mexican-Americans to their poverty, to the extent of denying them legal avenues of reprisal enjoyed by right of citizenship.

ation -- that the most sincere verbal gymnastics of sympathy do not commit a liberal to active support -- is chillingly familiar. All members of the Liberal Establishment, regardless of the level of power, are corroded by an hypo- and other local unions proved sympathy for the disenfranchised and active support for the most fascist of institutions.

This malady

is assured, once one acquires the mentality required by the present system of power politics. Any political system which is motivated by the tension of those who wield power and those who seek to do so requires a reservoir of expendable, or exploitable individuals. The Mexican-Americans form part of this within the system to concern themreservoir.

The history of the boycott in Washington offers a model of the Liberal Establishment in action. Maunuel Vazquez, a Mexican-American farm worker turned organizer, arrived from California to seek support from those in power in Washington in order to influence the larger food distributors, such as Safeway and Giant, and the government institutions to The paradox within this situ-join in the boycott of California grapes.

> Vazquez initially approached the traditionally liberal labor unions, but talks with the Central Labor Council, the Teamsters.

word of the boycott seldom reached the rank and file. Moreover, the union leadership greeted a suggested slow-down of deliveries to food distributors with strong disapproval. in the game, one must have the No longer are the unions champions of the dispossessed; they are too involved perpetuating their power selves with those who have nothing. Vazquez describes the union scene as ". . not only idle, but oriented to business rather than labor. They don't give a damn about us."

The Catholic church responded no differently than the rest of the local institutions. Cardinal O'Boyle issued a statement declaring that people have a right to organize, but he conveniently neglected the reality of the strike and the boycott. However, 'given the authoritarian and paternalistic context of contemporary Catholicism, it is unrealistic to expect support for the Mexican-American demands. Vazquez appraised the value of the Cardinal's lackluster response when he pointed out that, "The statement was not worth the paper it was written on."

Vazquez next approached Commissioner Washington's office. If Washington has spoken in behalf of the strike and boycott, no one knows anything about it. But it would be fantasy to expect Washington, so alluringly close to the seat of power, yet having so very little, would violate the rules of the game and speak in support of those with no power. Even such well-known black liberals as Channing Phillips and Walter Faunteroy could offer only vague promises of assistance. To this day, no concrete support has been forthcoming.

Vazquez' exercise in the futility of working within the corridors of power politics reveals something of the direction which both Washington and America have chosen. They have surrendered the controls to people who, despite their political labels, share a common consciousness and a consensus upon priorities. The game has its own logic and rules, termed legitimate, because they are the choice of those who have a stake in the game. The currency of the game is power; its logic allows only certain types of power to be used. Thus, before one can participate credentials of political, social or economic power as currency. The Mexican-Americans may have the illusion of power, but the proof of their impotence lies in the lack of response from the local power brokers. When the illusions are stripped away, and the strikers come to know how naked and unwashed they stand before the thrones of the Establishment, the only recourse is to swell the ranks of those whose weapons are violence and disruption. Harken, O JERUSALEM!

You can help by not buying California grapes until the strike is settled fairly. When you refrain from buying California grapes you are telling the growers that you do not wish to take the food from the mouth of this child.

It was at this time a fuse blew and we were left in the dark with a silent tube. The next mor Senator wever, we read in the New York Times the talk that Sentor Richard Russel of Georgia had delivered.

"If we all have to start over again with another Adam and Eve then I want them to be Americans not communists and I want them right here on this continent not off somewhere in Europe."

The Washington Daily News came out with banner headlines in the afternoon: Senator Sites Garden of Eden." We felt we had a story so got in touch with a wire tapper we know who works on Capital Hill. Was it pes ible, we soud ed, that Senator Russell was more deeply involved in this affair than the mmire choosing of the site' We dialed the number and heard the taped message the wire tapper had left "... will appoint Adam and Eve soon H.A. is known to have made appoint for 11:30 on Monday "

"Senator Russell?" we asked later that day in the privacy of his leather walled office, "Wha' are you prepared to do if Higher Authority fails to show?"

"Wel', shit," the Senator put his feet up on his desk, "we can"t uust sit arount on our ass anymore. No sir. " He paused to scratch his crotch. ''No sir. Fuck it. I mean shit. I'ii have to to goright on ahead with my plans."

"Don't you think, Senator, you should at least make an effort to get the Higher Authority's views before going ahead?" We wanted to know.

"Look here now, the girl in the outer office, Miss Scrot, went out of her way to make an appointment for him but frankly I'm not too optimistic."

"How's that, Senator?"

'We know more about creating now. Last time of course, was long ago. We have all the modern advantages."

There came a rumbling noise from the closet

"Hell," the Senator continued, "we've got our best people on this project Some of America's most creative people working on this "

The rumbling noise from the closet grew and caught the Senator's attention. Now we could hear plainly some sort of animal panting within. Was it Miss Scrot in the process of communicating with the higher Authority? The closet opened. The man in the tux adjusted his white gloves andthen his fly zipper. "Whew," he exclaimed. When he looked up we knew. Bert Parks.

"Yes, indeedy do," he stated, giving us all his TV paegent smile. He brought his hands together, turned in his toes, and beamed. "The Senator and I are about to convene a special session of the Miss America Paegent to choose the next and, "he boxed slightly, smiling, "the next one and the very only Eve."

The Senator clapped loudly. "I'm truly thrilled, " Bert sail "How about Adam?" we asked.

HARBBUJAH

by Christopher Cooper

"That's justice, " the senator said.

"Justice?" we asked.

"Justice FBI yeah. "The Senator turned to Bert Parks. "Cet over to the Bureau. See if Hoover's got his man,."

"J. Edgar Hoover always gets his man, " Bert giggled. The phone buzzed. Bert finished buttoning his vest and began spraying a pocket air-freshener.

"Don't get it on the walls dainn "The Senator let the phone ring. "It stains the skin." The Senator wavedus out so he could presumably answer the phone in private.

Bert ran ahead of us in the hall alling 'I know my choice for Eve." When we caught up with him on the marble steps he was in the process of inflating a plastic form. We stood in the snow as a replica of Venus de Milo took shape.

Later that afternoon we met our wiretapper at a Little Tavern. We asked him about the phone call that had caused the Senator to dismiss us from his office. "Yeah, it was that fellow Jenkins," the wiretapper said., his head bowed over the chipped coffee mug. "Jenkins was calling Russell, Senator Russell, from the first precinct. He was held there after he was arrested up at the Washington MOnument."

"What for?" we asked. "We didn't know was back in town." "They said he was fondling Giovernment property, but later they also apprehended and detained this unidentified Boy Scout Troop leader. From Pennsylvania. Small town. Let's see it was N. Yeah, Normal P.1 1 way he was having an epileptic sizure there in the detaining room. Some old woman who said she was his mother was screaming something about crime city and attacking Pairolan Porcine with a knapsack."
